Fans Make Own Arrangements As Many Clubs Don't Host Parties

We have around 300 Germans in town. We're hoping for a good crowd as people from other countries are expected to join us," says an official from the German consulate who didn't wish to be named.

Students, by far, are the most enthusiastic. Like Sumukh Sai, a student of St Paul's English School, who will be on Facebook while watching the match at home. "It will be very exciting to post updates and get instant reactions."

Girls are no less excited. Harshita J, a class X student of Oxford English School, says: "My parents and I will watch the match at home. It's definitely going to be quite a noisy night. I'm also understanding football through the World Cup, thanks to my father, who loves the game."

Many clubs have opted out of hosting big-screen parties due to the special police permission required to be open beyond 1am. But Bowring Institute has lined up a music party from 7.30pm that will go on till the match starts.

Frenzied fans are making their own arrangements. Sagnik Basu, a financial analyst who lives in RT Nagar, says: "I am a die-hard fan of Argentina. This is our moment. No matter

BALL IN WHOSE COURT? While both Argentina and Germany have their set of supporters, it remains to be seen whether the Messi magic will work in the final what, I'm going to watch this game at a friend's place in Fraser Town. I did it that throughout the World Cup—I'd return home after the matches by hiring a cab from his place."

The finale will be accompanied with high spirits and a special menu including kebabs and biryani and a number of flavoured ready-to-make popcorn.

Families too are living it up. Himanshu Thapa of Koramangala says: "My cousins and I have been supporting Argentina. But Germany has played very well. We'll just enjoy the game. I only hope our neighbours don't complain the next morning about the noise."

They perhaps won't because, hopefully, they'll be making some noise of their own. It's the World Cup final, after all.

State mulls heavy fines, tough laws for quacks

Shiva.Kumar@timesgroup.com

Bangalore: Quackery thrives in Karnataka, and little wonder, for quacks pay a small price if caught: Rs 100 for a first offence and Rs 500 for a second one. The third time, the fine imposed is Rs 1,000, or imprisonment up to two years — but only if proved guilty.

Soon, this could end, with the Karnataka government planning stringent rules, steep fines of up to Rs 5 lakh and imprisonment. The authorities are also looking to amend the law and initiate biometric registration of doctors.

A survey conducted by the Indian Medical Association in recent years says the number of quacks outnumber qualified doctors. These fake doctors run clinics across the state, especially in under-developed North Karnataka.

So far, authorities have detected 2,683 quacks in the state and shut down 2,462 clinics run by them. As per official statistics compiled after taking action, Bagalkot tops the list with 340, while the number of quacks detected in Koppal is 201, and 197 in Bijapur. In the southern region, Mysore district tops with 217 fake doctors. "Even if one quack causes the death of one patient in one year due to wrong diagnosis and treatment, nearly 2.5 million silent murders take place across the country," the survey said.

The Karnataka Ayurvedic and Unani Practitioners' Board is the nodal agency to keep vigil and take action against quacks. Shortage of doctors, who prefer to practice in cities, are the reasons attributed to the growing number of quacks operating from tents to well-established nursing homes.

To check this menace, the government is going in for biometric registration of doctors and proposes to tighten penal provisions. It recently issued a circular asking ayurveda, naturopathy, siddha and unani doctors to go in for online biometric registration with the Karnataka Ayurvedic and Unani Practitioners' Board for Life seems to be cheap in Karnataka. For, a quack arrested for the first time can walk free after paying a fine of just Rs 100. No wonder that charlatans outnumber qualified doctors. Thankfully, the government has finally decided to amend the medical practitioners Act to bring in stringent rules. However, instead of a steep fine, the new law should provide for putting quacks behind bars after the first conviction itself. As long as there's a shortage of doctors, mainly in government hospitals, the ailing poor will approach anyone promising cheap treatment. The onus is on the government to increase the number of doctors by opening more medical colleges and ensuring that existing doctors work for the poor.

Health and family welfare minister UT Khader said the government is amending Section 36 of the Karnataka Ayurveda, Naturopathy, Siddha, Unani and Yoga Practitioners' Registration and Medical Practitioners' Miscellaneous Act 1961, increasing the fine and punishment so it acts as a deterrent. As per the proposed amendment, if a quack is caught the first time, he is fined Rs 25,000. The second time, he has to cough up a fine of Rs 2.5 lakh and face one year jail term. The third-time offence entails a fine of Rs 5 lakh and up to two years in prison.

The Supreme Court defines a quack as a "person who does not have knowledge of a particular system of medicine but practices (it) and (is) a mere pretender of medical knowledge or skills". The Clinical Establishment Act, passed by Parliament in 2010, prevents quackery. But many states are yet to ratify the Act, following protests from various doctors' forums. The Act mandates registration and regulation of all clinical establishments in the country with a view to prescribing the minimum standards of facilities and services provided by them.

Woman hangs herself at home

Bangalore: A woman call centre employee was found hanging from a ceiling fan on Saturday morning.

The deceased, Diana Fernandes, 29, was living with boyfriend Rajeev Gowda at Banaswadi II B Cross, Bangalore East. On Friday, they partied with friends and slept late in the night. At 7.45am the next day, Diana called her friend and said she didn't wish to live anymore. The friend panicked and called Gowda who was still asleep. He woke up to find Diana hanging from the fan using a sari, police said.

"Diana was depressed after her father died some years ago. She was working in a call centre soon after she dropped out of college, and was a team leader. She was in a live-in relationship with Gowda; their plans to get married didn't work," Diana's relative told police. Her suicide note said nobody is responsible for her death. TNN

Gambling tourism busted, 59 held

Times News Network

Bangalore: Central Crime Branch police busted one of the biggest gambling rackets in the state on Friday night. They arrested 59 people, most of them from Gujarat, from two hotels in the city and seized Rs 2.92 crore in cash and gaming tokens.

According to police, 56 Gujaratis were on a gambling tour to the city: They arrived here on Friday and were to return home by Monday morning after spending the weekend playing three card poker. Two big party halls in Arafah Inn and Chetan International in Gandhinagar had been converted into gambling dens, where they were served liquor and ganja, police said.

Police suspect that the gamblers had used the 'hawala' route to transfer money from Gujarat to the city, as they could not have carried Rs 3

IISc students found after 3-hour search

Kolar: Police had a tough time tracking down five students of the Indian Institute of Science, Bangalore, who went missing at Antharagange Hills in Kolar on Saturday afternoon. They combed the hills for nearly three hours with the help of forest and fire personnel.

Kolar Rural SI Devendrapa told STOI that Preetham Bose, Arghya Rai, Hirnya Sonawala, Abhishek Chatterjee and Dyut K Sill came to the Antharagange Hills around noon. After lunch near a temple, they went around the hills. A group of monkeys chased them and the youths went helter-skelter and lost their way. They tried to establish contact with their friends but there were no mobile signals.

Finally, the youths managed to contact the police control room in Kolar. A team of cops, along with fire and forest personnel, headed to the hills. After three hours, they heard a faint cry and found the youths. Police brought them safely from the hills and made arrangements to send them to Bangalore. TNN

Security guard falls to death

Bangalore: Chanda Reddy, 78, a security guard with a private school, succumbed to head injuries after he accidentally slipped from the first floor of a guest house belonging to the school. This happened in Mune-kolalu, HAL, East Bangalore. The incident occurred around 4am when Reddy was walking down the steps, police said. "He slipped from the staircase and sustained head injuries," HAL police said. TNN
